I'm reasoning that on any college or university campus that the campus police do not routinely give warnings, seize vehicles and other property, or arrest the alumni without a clearly identifiable reason for it all.

Il of this happened so I'm sensing it has to be something else.

I would first note that I still have not seen the body cam video. . I've advised that I believe that this entire affair is really substitute for a plausible defense by my opponents in another case I am involved in, where I am the victim of fraud and theft of trade secrets This is not a garden variety trespassing violation.

She selected only one of my questions a la carte in her email response last Monday, but she did mention an upcoming hearing on an alleged violation of my pretrial release. Can that be an infringement on my right to due process I asked. does it matter that the police still have my property, but trying to get the property back from the police constitutes a violation of pretrial release that could subject me to jail without bond a week before my first appearance? isn't it possible that I serve jail time before the evidence is presented against me? fbi site I had wondered if she had seen the video that I had told her might be different than the written narrative. At the last hearing we had not yet been provided discovery and i wondered why we hadn't already filed a motion to dismiss. since then I've heard nothing.

in the narrative describing the events that took place the following are omitted after the first sentence but before the second, in the last paragraph, but everything should be corroborated by the body cam video.

- missing the conversation walking from Landis green to the business school. both officers had accompanied me and I had answered a question about the difference in the current CPA exam and when I had taken it.
- 2. i had explained that my phone was charging at the business school because i was stranded and my phone was dead.
- 3. i had explained that there had been no available outlets along Tennessee Street which i had walked down and back
- 4. upon arriving with the officers from Landis green now at the business school, Mason shows his laptop plugged in and shows the officers that it was still at only 12% after approximately 1 hour of charging.
- 5. this was the reason Mason was walking around Landis green.
- 6. my story had proven true

- 7. though we have not been able to see the video, to the best of my recollection it was only then that my name was run through the system.
- 8. Mason explained the potential danger that existed north of Tennessee Street.
- 9. Mason explained that he was conducting a forensic audit on a large case involving fraud and theft of trade secrets
- 10. Mason explained that he was the victim of a fraud and theft of trade secrets -- source code written by him
- 11. Mason explained that he had earlier this same day had his car seized by FSU PD
- 12. Mason explained that this was the reason it had been necessary to return to charge the phone only after all alternatives were exhausted
